

The Royal Australasian
College of Physicians

Australian Aboriginal Child Health Short Course

The RACP, in partnership with Nindilingarri Cultural Health Services, is developing a 4-module course for Paediatricians, Paediatric trainees, doctors, Aboriginal Health workers, Allied Health practitioners and Nurses in rural and remote areas on the following content topics

Module 1: Joining the dots
- Aiming for cultural competence

Module 2: Resilience and risks
- Social determinants of Aboriginal child health

Module 3: What's up, doc?
- Common and important diseases

Module 4: Worrying developments
- Determinants of child development

The modules will be accessible via the RACP website from May 2012

There will be an online forum live for 5 weeks from mid May 2012, approximately 2 weeks from the launch date. The forum will be jointly facilitated by a Medical Expert and an Aboriginal Health Worker and/or Nindilingarri Cultural Health Services Officer.

For more information on the modules and how you can be involved, please visit the website at www.racp.edu.au/page/policy-and-advocacy/rural-health/support-scheme

This Project has been funded by the Department of Health and Ageing under the Rural Health Continuing Education Sub-program (RHCE) Stream One which is managed by the Committee of Presidents of Medical Colleges.

The Royal Australasian College of Physicians is solely responsible for the content of, and views expressed in any material associated with this Project.